Health Share of Oregon distributes $4.6M to organizations to help with COVID-19 response

Funds to help communities of color disproportionately impacted by pandemic

(Portland, OR) – In response to the COVID-19 pandemic, Health Share of Oregon is distributing $4.6 million to support the work of local community-based organizations (CBOs). These funds will assist their responses to COVID-19 with a focus on serving communities of color, who have disproportionately been impacted by COVID-19. In total, 58 community-based organizations are receiving funds.

“COVID-19 has had a tragically unequal effect on communities of color,” said James Schroeder, CEO of Health Share of Oregon. “CBOs play a critical role in supporting the health of these communities. These funds will help them offset impacts, both in the community and to their own organizations. This is a meaningful step in addressing health equity.”

The Oregon Health Authority recently announced a change in how Medicaid funds could be distributed. For the rest of 2020, the distribution of quality withhold funds are no longer tied to quality performance. This change allows for greater flexibility for the distribution of funds. Health Share’s Board of Directors decided that 10% of these monthly withhold payments should directly address the current crisis. More specifically, they wanted these funds to support CBOs who are working with communities of color.

“Health Share and our partners trust that local CBOs know the best way to serve their communities,” said Schroeder. “We did not want to put strings or unnecessary barriers in the way of that service. It’s a critical need and time is of the essence.”
